	Wilstone Reservoir (SP91 B)		1	Second winter bird found in amongst the large BH roost at c1705 hours. Clear uninterrupted scope view of it alighting and after a minute or so flying up when they all went up. I tracked it in the group for c30s before losing it in the crowd. Continued scanning but never found it again. Distinguished by its tail as the first thing that struck me - dark lines on white as opposed to the black on all of the others. Its head was smudgy and nondescript given the huge variety among the BH but without the prominent BH smudge. Its dark red bill seemed thicker but not clearly so. When it flew I got good views of very light underwing. Overall it was a little paler but not very distinctive. Nor did it look any bigger than the larger BH.
